

BPL should not be allowed if it creates any interference with legally established communications. It must not create radio-frequency interference with broadcast stations, nor with any other licensed radio operations. To allow an interfering signal on the national power grid in order to provide internet access to a small under-served portion of the population would not be sound engineering practice.